Description

Mosin Nagant

The legendary Mosin-Nagant Russian rifle (As featured in use by Sniper Vassili Zaitsev-Jude Law-in the film 'Enemy at the Gates') first produced between the 1890s and continued up until the 1950s. World War II brought about a new pattern of carbine called the M1944 and was then used as the main Soviet Army rifle. To celebrate this legend AirForce One have introduced an ultra-realistic version of this classic as a 16 round steel 'BB' repeater rifle. An impressive velocity of 427 fps, the M1944 has a metal barrel, receiver, quality engineered bolt mechanism and magazine. Fitted with an integral folding bayonet with a cruciform blade attached. Included in the package is a 16-shot magazine.

The rifle is the same dimensions as the original but is constructed with a polymer body and weighs in at approx. 8lbs. Power train is by a single 12 gram CO2 capsule which offers approx. 40+ shots, field strippable, fixed front sight and the rear has sight adjustable. This unique rifle is a great tribute to the original Legend.
